An apparently “simple” object like the chair becomes the center of meticulous design study aimed at obtaining a mix of lightness, ergonomic, iconic shape, resistance and versatility. The key factors lie not only in design but also in the search for right materials and connections.

Bled is a traditional Chair in the best sense of the word. With its subtle lines and compact dimensions Bled Chair is exceptionally light, both physically and visually. This simple and clean design would not compromise the harmony of any interior.

Bled Chair with its upholstered seat and pronounced armrest is suitable for frequent use in public spaces, such as restaurants, bars and hotels, but it is also perfect for private interiors.

Designed by Ado Avdagić.

The main idea behind Bud was to develop a working home desk that would be versatile as much as possible utilizing natural materials while preserving warmth of home, well engineered, sustainable and finished with handcrafted know-how. The desk is made of solid wood oak and walnut as a bright and dark version, brass hinges on flaps and Kvadrat 100% wool in a range of selected colours which provide acoustic features.

From the idea of the unstable equilibrium of the Cairn Stones of the Zen world, Cairn is born, a table composed of two full-bodied legs and a generous top made of solid wood. All surfaces are soft and smooth, just like pebbles smoothed by the flow of water.

Diorama is a collection of tables to dream yourself as a curator. A crystal-clear dialog takes place between oak and glass to form a precious case with a concealed technicality. DUOMO Chair designed by Andrea Steidl Duomo is a challenge of woodworking construction with such a complex exterior. It is not only a bold statement furniture piece, but also a tribute and display of excellent craftsmanship. While the chairs' straight lines and soft backrest come together in a play of contrast between massive wood and empty spaces, as you get closer you can admire the rich details of its intricate wood working.

Its vertical and straight aesthetic make it close to the vertical and detailed appearance of European Duomo, as the Milanese one, that with its impressive façade and bold presence has become an icon of the city it represents.

HAKU is a severe yet articulate set of wooden cabinets, from wall-mounted to freestanding or even equipped with a mirror. Breaking the ever-present orthogonality typically found throughout ordinary box furniture, HAKU explores the principle of axial repetition. Taking advantage of its spatial perception while favouring the act of a non-linear interaction.

The soul of the collection is the fluidity of the shapes that fill each joint or intersection as if the object did not derive from the union of the components but was a single molded piece, with geometries so fluid as to seem like a printed piece. The purity of the material evokes a tactile sensation, tempting to touch those surfaces perfectly smooth to the touch but visually rich in natural veins. The organic forms call to mind the classics of Northern European cabinet-making with a reference to some iconic elements of design from the 1950s but remade in a contemporary perspective. Like the rounded corners that give a bourgeois aura and the legs that suspend the elements, putting spaces to fill, synonymous with visual comfort, in the center of the scene. In fact, the collection mainly consists of cabinets and tables or in any case furniture with shelves and the imagination goes to the reassuring atmospheres of the houses of those years, however revised with a minimalist view.

MARSHALL designed by Zoran Jedrejčić .
At the table, on the chair we socialise, drink, eat, tell over events and become more familiar with each other. Around this practically sacred objects, whole families and statesmen gather. Each of us in our memories carries our own table, chair, bench. It was while these memories were being played, that the Marshall Collection came about. With the Marshall Collection we carefully put in the center these memories and simple joy of life, by underlining everyday needs to touch, observe, listen, relax, enjoy, eat... The typology of chosen pieces and dialectic of the forms are simple, masculine but fluid, always in balance between thin wooden structure opposing to other natural materials carefully selected to complete each piece of the Marshall Collection such as the untreated leather, the pure marble or the cast glass with its changing colours. Those combination of hot and cold materials leads to a perfect balance not only in sight but also in touch.

Designed by Simon Morasi Piperčič.
Most of the seating benches currently on the market are uncomfortable because their seating surface is flat. Therefore, we have decided to add a concave slot through the whole length of the seating surface, to make it more comfortable and allow for longer seating time. The selection of materials is quite logical, each of them is used in its most appropriate constructive purpose. The range of different finishes and colors is meant to be easily matched with any kind of contemporary residential or contract project.

NERVOSA designed by Francesco Faccin. The project is based on traditional chairs typical of the Tyrolean and South Tyrolean area. They have a very interesting feature from a structural point of view: the seat is the key element that unites all the pieces. The “Nervosa” chair formally moves away from that typology but retains its constructive spirit while being made entirely with CNC technology. The material is entirely solid wood, which is perfect for the precision workmanship and mechanical characteristics required by this design. The chair is designed to be made of natural wood but with some aniline-treated variants that still allow the grain to show through.

The theme is the minimalist lines applied to pieces of furniture from the past. The collection aims to offer a new interpretation of classic objects through a regeneration of the style with Woak's own processing techniques. The intent is to dismantle the common places of traditional forms, eliminating frills and elements that are too decorative to make the object contemporary and at the same time functional. Ninas consists of a console, a sideboard and a coffee table where the clarity of the shape has been contrasted with the marble top that gives character and prestige. The dining table is an eclectic element of the collection to play with the other pieces around it.

A melting pot DNA where skills originate from crossed cultures and combine with the woodworking tradition of the land where the raw material comes from. Woak symbolises the strength of a company and the desire to open up to the new with an almost nomad vocation to travel and absorb knowledge from all over the world and then mix it with the original heritage of craftsmanship carpentry.

Instead of products, we create “pieces”, crafted with great care for the users as well the environment. We are passionate about working with the warmth of solid wood, especially oak and walnut, and attach great importance to sustainable raw materials.

Designed by Rainer Bachschmid.
For my dialogue with nature, wood offers the maximum potential. It is alive, mouldable, stable, sustainable and always radiates naturalness. There are only a few producers who have recognised this potential and know how to use it. That craftsmanship in handling those attributes for example is also reflected in the potential of Woak. My products made of wood should retain their natural value. Clever details highlight this expression and emphasize Woak's craftsmanship. I prefer to work with breathable oils and am fascinated by translucent colors that highlight the structure of the wood. In addition, a sensitive mix with other materials and colors creates even more expression and uniqueness.

A meltin pot DNA where skills originate from crossed cultures and combine with the woodworking tradition of the land where the raw material comes from. Woak symbolises the strength of a newly independent country and the desire to open up to the new with an almost nomad vocation to travel and absorb knowledge from all over the world and then mix it with the original heritage of craftsmanship carpentry.

Designed by Andrea Steidl REPETA is a symbol of the know-how and technology of Woak; their excellence in the industry of wood working. During my visit to the manufacturing facilities, I was immediately captivated by the technology and manufacturing facilities where Woak demonstrates their mastery. The industrial structure seems very efficient in which long lines of carpenters and workers transform a rough trunk by assembling perfect, linear and smooth planks into solid wood tops, dining tables or furniture; the noblest quality of wooden furniture. They are characterized by the furniture industry as well as the tradition of cabinet-making and high-quality carpentry. The combination of milling machine technology and the experience of old carpenters who have loved and cultivated woodworking for 30 years made it clear to me that narrating this process within a single product was a priority. I had to find a language that would exploit this context and its production qualities. This is why Repeta has a strong character, it is the character and strength of the workers and of a land where solid wood has always been part of the production of quality furniture and objects. The repetition of pieces of the same shape and size for me was the mirror of the industrial repetition of a single piece which within Woak is a must to obtain a complex and uniform product of solid wood. The Repeta collection was designed to transform their industrial culture into complex furniture with a strong and unique aesthetic. The collection is composed of containers and sideboards with an assembled, faceted and grooved structure, which is very complex to make. It was just as complex to find the assembly model that must be carried out by the expert hands of the carpenters. The collection creates objects with geometric motifs declined in different shades of wood used to contain the objects of our unique passions.

Tria is inspired by antique milking stools. Tria transforms the milking chair typology into a contemporary high quality coffee table, minimal and with a clever construction. It is made from walnut and a hand crafted glass table top. The details are tactile and invites you to touch the table. It is an inviting table, that nourishes your senses.

Designed by Andrea Steidl WHERRY is composed of intricate rounded boards, the result of a refined artisan woodworking. It draws inspiration from the traditional English boats of the same name and the fluid shapes of their oars which, in a transitional game between the shaft and the paddle, are enriched with details. In the chair, the boards are repeated, marking the rhythm of the backrest and harmoniously enveloping those who sit down, as in traditional Windsor armchairs.
